

ADAM RICCHETTI FACING DEATH FOR 'MASSACRE'

Missouri-Oklahoma Gangster Is Convicted By Jury

DENIES HE WAS IN KANSAS CITY

Nabbed Near Wellsville
Before 'Pretty Boy' Floyd Was Slain

SALEM, June 18.—Adam Ricchetti, a Missouri-Oklahoma gangster, was convicted last night of murder by a jury that assessed the death penalty.

These will be dropped unless his conviction is reversed on appeal. The convicted man denied from the witness stand he was in Kansas City the day of the slayings but admitted he was here the night before.

At that time, he said, he was drunk. Eight other persons have been tried on conspiracy charges in connection with the slayings, with resulting fines and sentences.

Nabbed Near Wellsville

Ricchetti was arrested near Wellsville by Chief of Police John Fultz of Wells, Mo., before the slaying of Earl Williamsport, north of East Liverpool.

Fultz surprised Ricchetti and Floyd in a gun fight that followed. Ricchetti surrendered, Floyd fleeing.

Federal agents then were brought into the chase and Floyd was finally run down on a little farm where he had bought his dinner from the widow owner.

State PWA Directors Meet With Roosevelt

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Protests against limiting expenditures in the administration's work relief drive to $1,100 or $1,200 per worker were made today by contractors and road builders. One spokesman said "useful and permanent" projects would be outlawed by such a restriction.

The objections were raised as state works progress administrators met in regional conferences to frame plans embracing small, inexpensive projects asked by President Roosevelt yesterday in a talk in which he said "politics, so far as we are concerned, is out."

Mr. Roosevelt told the state directors at the White House that they should make every effort to place the unemployed in private industry even if projects started through the $4,000,000,000 work relief fund had to be stopped.

The President was optimistic on recovery prospects. After emphasizing that the great bulk of projects selected must, with some exceptions, be small and inexpensive to provide for the employment of 3,500,000, he said:

"We are checking and re-checking all the subsistence homestead projects. Some that are going on now we will probably continue; others not yet fully under way may be dropped."

There are 64 such projects, 18 of which are not yet functioning. This development occurred as Tugwell, back from New Mexico where he delivered a graduation address at the State university, issued orders that work of establishing the resettlement administration hit a faster pace.

"We hope to be all set by July 15," Baldwin said.

Mahoning Planning Road Improvements In This Vicinity

Eighty-eight miles of macadam county roads, including more than 30 highways in 11 townships, will be improved this summer by Mahoning county Surveyor George M. Montgomery, if county commissioners approve the proposed $46,210 program.

Most of the highways will be surface treated, and the work probably will begin as soon as possible after the commissioners' approval.

Among the list of improvements and the townships in which they are situated are:

Goshen Township—South Range Center, Lisbon-Caulfield, North Benton-Calla, and State Line roads.

Jackson Township—Youngstown-New Castle and New Middletown-Struthers roads.

Smith Township—Beloit East, Beloit Snoddes, South Range Center, Smith Center and North Canton West roads.

Homestead Plans To Be Abandoned

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The government is thinking of abandoning 18 subsistence homestead projects inherited by the resettlement administration upon the death of the homestead corporation, June 16.

C. B. Baldwin, chief assistant to Rexford G. Tugwell, head of the resettlement unit, in an interview today said:

"We are checking and re-checking all the subsistence homestead projects. Some that are going on now we will probably continue; others not yet fully under way may be dropped."

There are 64 such projects, 18 of which are not yet functioning. This development occurred as Tugwell, back from New Mexico where he delivered a graduation address at the State university, issued orders that work of establishing the resettlement administration hit a faster pace.

BUS DITCHED OUTSIDE CITY

Stuebenville Motorist Unwittingly Causes Two Accidents

A large Martz line bus, headed for Cleveland, was run into a shallow ditch five miles northwest of Salem on Route 14 at 4 a. m. today when an automobile in front of the bus stopped suddenly and the bus driver, George Mott of Wilkes Barre, Pa., swerved off the road to avoid hitting the car.

No one was hurt. State highway patrolmen who investigated, said that William Wannenmacher, Steubenville, driving north, stopped suddenly when fog obscured his view.

Not realizing that he had forced the bus off the road, Wannenmacher continued several yards and then came back and stopped to ask the bus driver the way to Cleveland.

When Wannenmacher stopped this time he was struck from the rear by a Goodrich test truck driven by W. R. Menerville of Akron. Only slight damage was done and no one was injured.

A machine driven by H. L. Kyser of Washingtonville was bumped from the rear on East State st at 6:30 p. m. Monday by a transport truck in charge of Frank Piancetti, who agreed to pay for a bumper that was knocked from Kyser's car.

Toledo Electrical Workers End Strike

(By Associated Press)

TOLEDO, June 18.—United electrical workers of the Toledo Edison company ended their second strike of the month today and returned to their jobs as arbitration of their demands for a 20 per cent wage increase went forward.

Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor, will determine whether the workmen will receive an immediate 5 per cent increase. An arbitration board of three members will consider the demand for an additional 15 per cent increase if McGrady's decision is affirmative.

Members of the Office Workers' union voted last night to return to work today under a similar plan.

The strike had been in progress for four days, but the company has been able to maintain normal service. A few areas in the city were without power at times because of the short circuiting of high tension lines. J. P. O'Connor, vice president of the company, said:

"The Wilson Rubber company in Canton remained closed today as union workers picketed the entrances. The strike was called when the company refused to reinstate a discharged employee."

A second strike of rubber workers was threatened at the General Tire and Rubber company in Akron. Rex Murray, president of the general local of the United Rubber Workers union, said the company laid off workers in violation of a promise made in a strike-settlement made last year.

Vetoes Items Totalling Nine Million From Measure

SAYS HE'S AMAZED OVER INCREASES

1936 Expenditures Make Up Bulk Of Items Slashed

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, June 18.—Governor Davey signed the $97,000,000 biennial budget bill today, after vetoing items totaling approximately $9,000,000. The executive said the items he took from the bill would not affect the appropriation for the state highway department.

In a statement accompanying his announcement that he had signed the measure, the governor said he was "amazed to see the amount of increases in appropriations scattered generally throughout the bill." He added that "apparently the fact

Among the items sliced from the biennial budget bill approved today by Governor Davey was $8,000 for work on the south and east walls of Guilford lake, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

was overlooked that most of the citizens of Ohio are still struggling to save their homes and farms and businesses. There seems to have been a mad scramble on the part of nearly everyone to take more money out of the state treasury."

The executive asserted he could "see no justification for such a raid on the state treasury."

By far the greater part of the vetoed items were for 1936 expenditures, even coal bills for various institutions feeling the pruning knife.

No Division Escapes

Apparently no division of the wide expanse of state government escaped the specific items numbering hundreds.

Not passing up his own department the executive cut $17,000 from his budget, including salaries and general office expenses.

He slashed senate appropriations $56,000 and those of the house of representatives $19,000. The cuts for the legislative branches were chiefly wages amounting to $25,000 for the senate and $2,000 for the house, and for expenses of various special investigating committees.

CALL DEPUTIES TO PASCOLA MINE

11 Stockholders Operate Mine Under Cooperative Plan

Deputy sheriffs from Mahoning county in charge of Deputy Frank Burnside were called again to the former Pascola mine, several miles east of Salem on Route 14 at 7 a. m. today when pickets were reported watching the mine.

Things were found to be peaceful, however.

Pickets have been gathering at the road entrance to the mine grounds, mine officials said today, and sometimes the men are in groups numbering as high as 75. On other occasions only a mere handful of pickets assemble.

Within the last two weeks the John Pascola mine has been incorporated with 11 stockholders. These 11 stockholders are operating the mine at present. No other miners are employed, it was announced today.

The incorporators were announced as: John Pascola, Eva Pascola and Louis Presocco. The 11 stockholders are: N. W. Brightwell, E. S. Swinell, Felix Perry, Mike Perry, John Bottosco, Alfred Sonugere, William Muhleman, John Crestano, Joe Bramdoni and Virginio DelBo.

During the busy season prior to April 1 approximately 75 men were employed at the mine. The general slump of the summer months at present requires only the present working force of the 11 miners, the incorporators said. The pickets, it is understood, are seeking jobs in the mine.

E. Liverpool Women Named Officers At G.A.R. Encampment

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, June 18.—First business sessions of the 69th annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic were to get underway here today.

Selection of 50 representatives in blue of a site for next year's encampment was scheduled as the highlight of the day. Cleveland is seeking the meeting.

A commander to succeed Charles I. McArthur of Urbana will be elected tomorrow with a slate of other officers. Candidates for the commandery are Simeon Chapman, Sunbury; Francis S. Dayton, Marion; and H. F. Russell, Alliance.

The veterans and delegates to sessions of allied patriotic societies will participate in a parade tomorrow.

Meetings by the allied groups were presented yesterday to the 44 veterans, who paid tribute, at the Confederate cemetery here, to the men in gray who were war victims and attended a reception at the governor's mansion.

The contingent in blue, which was expected to be augmented by another dozen today, represented the 350 living Ohio G. A. R. members.

Mrs. W. S. Crawford of East Liverpool will head the Besy Ross club of the Ladies of the G. A. R. for the next year. She was elected yesterday by the organization, composed of past presidents of the ladies' group.

Mrs. Maude Logan, East Liverpool, was named secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. Flora B. Young, Toledo, chaplain.

Find "Saturnalia" In Ship Subsidies

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Charging that ship subsidy policies led to "saturnalia" by men bent on "robbing the taxpayer," the senate ocean mail committee today denounced past operation of merchant marine subsidies and demanded drastic terms for any future government aid.

It also charged that some public officials "flagrantly betrayed their trust" and said "government of trustees made a farce" of the competitive bidding provision of the Jones-White merchant marine act of 1928. It said "the standards for computing compensation" under this act are "unworkable and preclude fraud."

Frankly advocating government ownership and operation of merchant marine, the committee nevertheless conceded that better opposition would prevent this and so it recommended an alternative plan of "government ownership and private operation, the operation to be subsidized where this is proved necessary."

Nine Are Injured

MARIETTA, O., June 18.—En route home from Spencer, W. Va., to Nashport, Muskingum county, nine members of one family were injured last night when their automobile overturned eight miles north of here. The car was driven by Almer Longfellow, 38, who said he lost control while passing another car. Longfellow's wife, Elsie, 29; their four children, and his brother, George, 48; father, James, 80; and a cousin, Walter Hford, 42, were injured.

Lázaro Cárdenas

Plutarco Calles

Saturnino Cedillo

Mexico's turbulent political situation apparently had ended in victory for Lázaro Cárdenas, president and rival of Gen. Plutarco Calles, who has been virtual dictator of Mexico for the past eight years. Gen. Saturnino Cedillo, ruler of San Luis Potosi, is another political power whose actions may have a far-reaching effect on Mexico's future. Cárdenas is backing a six-year plan of economic development designed to give a "new deal" to workers and peasants.

Prospects of a damaging chinch bug outbreak are becoming more certain as the month of June progresses. A survey by T. H. Parks, extension entomologist for the Ohio State university, in Wayne county, June 10 showed from 1 to 125 bugs present in each three feet of drilled row. The average was 30 bugs. This degree of infestation, Parks says, points to serious injury to corn that is growing next to the heavier infested wheat fields.

Columbiana Affected

Similar conditions exist in Columbiana county. County Agent Floyd Lower states. While the damage is not expected to be as serious in Columbiana county as in counties in the north central part of the state, yet serious damage is expected unless heavy rains occur in late June.

Damage to corn can be prevented only by the construction and proper maintenance of creosote barrier lines, according to Lower.

A meeting for farmers of Columbiana and Mahoning counties at which the proper construction of barriers will be demonstrated, will be held on the H. A. Shinn farm, two miles northwest of Salem on Route 14 at 1:30 p. m. Wednesday. A representative of the State entomologist will conduct the demonstration.

GEN. CALLES WITHDRWS

If Gen. Pitarco Elias Calles wanted to withdraw as dictator of Mexico, he could. But when did dictators start to hand over the reins to their critics?

Despite anything the general may say and do, he is Mexico's strong man. As long as he lives he will be a political factor. He is entrenched in his position.

Americans are not generally aware of the significance of Mexico's political struggle. To call it a revolution seems trite to them because Mexico hasn't been plagued for a generation.

Yet, it is a revolution, in the sense that class is struggling against class for supremacy. It is a typical revolution, furthermore, in the fact that some of the most furious struggling is being done by the revolutionists themselves.

Gen. Calles is leader of the revolutionary party in control, yet he is under attack by the party's left wing, which is closer to communism than alarmists in the United States like to admit. Gen. Calles, himself, is an exploiter, which automatically bars him from the confidence of the proletarian section of the party.

That section wants a leader whom it can endorse without reservation. In Mexico's president, Lazaro Cardenas, it thinks it has found the right man. Thus, Gen. Calles seems to have been forced to withdraw. As a strategist, he undoubtedly understands the advantage of a retreat. It would be surprising to discover that he is not letting the opposition play into his hands. Dictators are not in the habit of surrendering to their critics. If they were, there would be no dictators.

SQUAWK

Ewing Y. Mitchell, deprived of his government job as assistant secretary of commerce, threatens to stay in Washington until he has "cleaned up the town." Mr. Mitchell's anger over his removal from a job he refused to relinquish quietly has settled in his tongue.

The charges he will make and the stories he will tell while he is cooling off will get attention, but perhaps not so much sympathetic attention as Mr. Mitchell anticipates. Unfortunately for him in his role as an exposé, he resembles chiefly a disgruntled politician.

Furthermore, the things he has to say are too well known to be startling. It is common knowledge in Washington and no longer unbelievable information outside Washington that a disorderly state of affairs exists within the government.

President Roosevelt, who has depended heavily on team work for the success of his administration, is not getting cooperation. Officials are jealous of each other. The knife in the back is more common than the pat on the shoulder. Rugged individualism, apparently, flourished in Washington in direct ratio to efforts to outlaw it.

Mr. Mitchell's resignation, because his "aptitudes were not along the necessary executive lines," was sought last September. He protested against resigning, saying he had "uncovered serious derelictions in the administration of several bureaus" in the department of commerce. Apparently, his superior, Secretary of Commerce Roper, was not impressed with the evidence. Secretary Roper knew Mr. Mitchell would squawk when he was ousted. It's an old story in government. Ousted jobholders nearly always think they can square themselves by telling everything they know. Only rarely do they succeed.

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, June 18.—Probably no other offices in Manhattan give such an aura of simplicity as the ground floor quarters of Vincent Astor and those next door of the original John Jacob Astor estate. They occupy a three-story brick building in West 26th st. off beaten paths.

Small and shining brass plates at the side of the doors announce the occupants. Entrance is up a brief flight of white stone steps, scoured daily like those in Baltimore. The windows are barred with sturdy wrought iron and inside the lighting fixtures cast the glow of an older day.

There are high stand-up desks, piles of ancient ledgers and furniture that suggests the middle 80's. Vincent Astor, head of the $70,000,000 real estate fortune, is at his offices regularly when in the city. Many employees are those grown venerable in service. The skull capped sort.

Astor is the real boss of the properties. And has shown such executive skill that, despite a depression where real estate fortunes were the worst hit, he has kept out of the red. The English branch of the Astor fortune has not been so fortunate.

Frank Buck will come back to America with one more wild cargo—but that will likely be his last. He has purchased controlling interest in the famous Raffles hotel in Singapore and expects to retire to the leisurely post of Mine Host. He will make occasional safari into the jungles for special animal orders, but mostly he will be ready to meet his American tourist friends on the veranda in the cool of the evening for the customary gin-sling. He also has orders for many magazine articles he has never been able to supply. So he'll do some writing, too.

Authors from small towns, especially fiction writers, are usually unpopular with home folk. The beloved, such as Irvin Cobb for whom Paducah named its leading hotel, are a minority. Often the natives imagine they see themselves in the book characters. Or maybe it is their friends or relatives. Edgar Lee Masters, whose Spoon River Anthology made him famous years ago, is freely disliked in his home district. Sauk Center, Minn., bristled a bit over the "Main Street" of their native son, Sinclair Lewis. So did Marysville, Mo., at some of Homer Croy's lines.

Post Item: The scientific exploitation of those twins to demonstrate the difference between cultivation and non-cultivation of the brain strikes this gurgling fuddy-duddy as about the crudest gesture of modern times. One of the boys is shown in the newsreels as a marvel and the other as stupid and dull, a stigma the child will carry to the end of his days. It's a sort of painless vivisection that should stupefy societies for the prevention of cruelty to children.

Burton Holmes, the lecturer, is one of the most indefatigable of the caviar addicts. He has a blob almost every night for dinner and often snaffles a smidgin for lunch. Rudy Vallee, too, is a caviarist, gulping hefty portions for his midnight repast. Al Jolson is such a lover of the dish that he often carries a large imported can of it on cross-country trips. When Paul Whiteman breaks diet, he always goes for caviar. Strangely enough, exiled Russians show little taste for the most famous edible of their land. Incidentally, a five and ten cent store version of caviar, shad roe salted and dyed, appears in many cafeterias.

Word comes back to Broadway that Fred Niblo, the actor and one time movie director, has deserted the studios permanently for a life of farming. His wife, Enid Bennett, has shown similar enthusiasm for the soil. They purchased an old estate of many acres near Lakeport, Calif., and daily Niblo in denim cuts hay, prunes the orchard and fenders the dairy stock. He has declared it the happiest period of his career and that his tenure as an agriculturist is permanent. And then there's Watterston Rothacker's back-to-the-land movement near Triunfo, which so far includes Winne Sheehan, Will Hays and others.

Someone sends this souse story from Rob Wagner's Script: The stew rang the bell then sat on the top step ever so long. "Why don't you ring again?" asked a kindly passer-by. Perhaps they didn't hear." Mumbled the jag: "The'll with 'em. Let 'em wait!"

Specialists in full evening dress say two essentials for correctness are a proper fitting white vest of the exact cut—the style changes quarterly—and an expertly tied bow with the ends just so! No white bow should be tied more than once. If it fails at the first tie, keep on tying a fresh one. Chifton Webb often uses a half dozen before he achieves that just-so dash and he is considered the hi-de-hi of full evening attire.

THE STARS SAY

For Wednesday, June 19

According to the planetary configurations said to intervene on the affairs of this day, a sudden force of a devastating and disruptive nature may be expected. This influence may carry one abruptly into new environs, associations and interests in which the support of friends, especially women, may assist in overcoming difficulties.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a very interesting year in which commotion and sudden upheaval may find its compensations in the friendly aid of women. Tact and diplomacy are necessary to such happy denouements, but be very discreet.

A child born on this day may be talented, independent, restless and unsettled, but will win success eventually through influential friends.

Notable nativity: Elbert Hubbard, author.

Dangers of a Simple Cold

MANY PERSONS disregard the common cold, little realizing that it may be the forerunner of something really serious. The respiratory diseases, such as bronchitis, pneumonia and pleurisy, too often follow the neglected cold.

Empyema is a frequent complication of pneumonia and other inflammatory conditions caused by the common cold. This is the formation of pus in the chest or pleural cavity.

The pleura is the delicate membrane which lines the chest and surrounds the lungs. The germs of a cold may be carried to the pleura where they set up severe irritation and inflammation. If the germs are pus forming, empyema soon occurs.

The disease is attended by sudden rise in temperature which is usually preceded by a chill. This is followed by severe sweating.

Fever Up and Down

The fever drops within 24 hours but soon rises to its peak. This up and down temperature continues for several days. Such peculiar fluctuations in the degree of fever, is spoken of as the septic curve. If it is associated with the history I have described, it should always arouse suspicion of empyema.

Unfortunately, the condition is often regarded as merely the aggravated symptoms of the severe cold or ordinary infection. That it is serious is recognized when the sufferer complains of pain in the chest and has marked difficulty in breathing. The truth is established when the pain becomes so severe as to interfere with sleep and rest. At this stage an x-ray picture will prove the presence of pus in the lung.

In many cases the true state of affairs can be determined by tapping the suspected area, the doctor using a needle specially devised for withdrawing pus. Even now the failure to obtain pus does not rule out the possibility of empyema, because the needle may not have entered the infected area.

May Need Operation

But every measure must be taken definitely to locate the pus. Recovery and complete cure are only possible by its removal. To accomplish this an operation may be required.

Fortunately, such severe measures are rarely needed, but if the doctor advises it do not resist the operation. In the hands of a competent surgeon it is not a dangerous procedure. Bear in mind that in a severe case of empyema this is the only method of cure. Delay leads to the formation of deep-seated pockets of pus.

Prompt attention to a simple cold will prevent this and other dreaded complications. Carelessness and neglect are dangerous. To protect the patient's health, as well as to guard the family against infection, there should be immediate care and medication when there appears the slightest indication of a cold.

WHOSE WIFE? A CYRUS K. MANTEL MURDER MYSTERY

by GLADYS SHAW ERSKINE AND IVAN FIRTH

CHAPTER XIII

"Is that so?" Well, I'll have you know that I can take care of myself. And I have no connection with the mess, as you put it, excepting an official one," exploded Betty.

"Then why did you dash out and your uncle on the case?"

"That's my business, and I can manage my own thank you!"

"Don't let's quarrel, Betty," he pleaded, don't let's quarrel."

Her face softened in answer to a tone of pleading, when he made the mistake of saying too much.

"There is no time to quarrel," he said, "there is too much at stake. Let's better stick to each other now."

"Oh," she gasped, "so that's it. Well Mr. Wilbur Renton, you can look out for yourself, and I can look out for myself. But perhaps you'd better look out for yourself."

"Betty, Betty, you don't understand. It's only you I am thinking of, not myself at all."

"Yeah?" Betty asked slyly, "and that's what you told me when you were running after Isobel?"

The name of the murdered woman, Isobel, both of them in a flash, of their temper, but the suddenness of that flaming wrath re-appeared.

She came to the door.

Miss Betty, the newspaper office, she said on the phone, she said, and glanced at Renton with a gleam of anger in her little, hazel eyes. "I reckon Miss Betty's got to go now, huh," she said, "I'll get my hat and cane."

Renton shrugged his broad shoulders, what had gotten into that household? They all seemed to be in a bad mood. He was not sure of himself. He'd try and get up with Betty before they quarrelled, but she'd just have to tell him that she couldn't possibly handle this case. Why it wasn't decent, she couldn't do it, and besides, there were other reasons. He'd rather tell her about it, but she'd just have to refuse to go with this case. Betty re-entered the room, hatted and cloaked. "I'll have to rush," she said, pulling on her gloves and leaving his eyes.

"Betty," he started toward her, "I'll have to call up your paper, you just can't."

"I don't have to call them," she said nervously, "they just call me. I have to go right away and interview Lawrence Vane." She looked wide, tortured eyes to his. "You can drop me at the Tombs, if you want to," she said.

As Betty went from the sunshine of the day into the gloom of the Tombs, she was conscious of a horrible, such as she had never experienced before on any of her official visits to that building of sorrows and signs.

In her chosen career of newspaper writer, she had many unpleasant assignments, but none that had really come close to her heart here. This was almost too much to have to visit in his cell, the man she loved helplessly to have wear apart the veil that he had worn over his sorrow so that a public could stare and gloat. She gave her name and showed her press card to the officer in charge and in a moment was traveling the same route that her sister and the Inspector had followed that morning.

"Here you are," the guard grunted, and his keys jangled as he opened a cell "you can have ten minutes."

Lawrence Vane sat as he had all the morning with his head buried in his hands. He did not look up as the cell door opened, nor did he turn at the sound of the guard's key.

"A lady reporter to talk to you," the guard, and walked away a little distance to wait.

"Go away," said Vane violently, without glancing up.

"Mr. Vane," said Betty softly, "at the sound of her voice he looked up. Incredulously, "Miss Betty, you! You shouldn't have come here."

"I had to," she stammered, "my paper sent me."

"He tried to hide his disappointment, "I see."

"You contradicted, "it isn't that, any of your friends would be glad to come and see you. Oh, it's terrible. The guard rushed from her now. "That should be here, when any fool can know that you are innocent."

"What's that?" he was incredulous of his own ears.

"I mean any one that truly loves you, must know that you could have done anything so simple."

"Let me get this straight," he said, "you don't believe that I'm Miss Betty?"

"Of course not!" she said, "no one could really believe that."

"Well, Ingles does, and he's a friend and a good police officer and everyone else seems to think he does and after all, the evidence is all against me. They certainly found that horrible body in the roof terrace, and I was the only one around. But Betty, earnestly leaned close to him, "that wasn't the body they found."

This was the first time Betty had said that the body was denied by the fact that of his bride. It gave her a queer start, a shiver raced over her whole body at the thought of the dead woman, of his denial of the body and all that it implied.

"Isobel?" she breathed faintly.

"Have you told anyone else?" she asked.

"Yes, I told Ingles, but he didn't believe me, and I told Mr. K. Mantel."

"Has Uncle Cyrus been here?"

"Yes, this morning early. He's just great and he said he was here to help me. Oh, do you think he can. Betty, do you think he can?"

"He can if any one can," she assured him sturdily. "Uncle Cyrus

"You shouldn't have come here," said Vane. "I had to; my paper sent me," explained Betty.

can find a clue where every one else has despaired of there being one and he can follow a clue, once it is found to the N'th degree of deduction Uncle Cyrus never gives up, and he doesn't fail if there's anything for him to work on.

"Everything that there is seems to be against me," Vane was moody and somber again, his temporary brightness of interest gone. "I must say that if I were in their place, I would think as they do. It's a good lesson for anyone to learn. Not to judge too quickly on what seems to be. Circumstantial evidence is a cruel thing," he laughed shortly. "They say that sometimes jailbirds become philosophers," he said, "but I could choose an easier chair to do my thinking in than that over-warm one they have up at Sing Sing."

Betty straightened up, and looked him in the eye.

"Now listen to me, Lawrence Vane," she said, and it seemed to him that some of the fire of her hair had crept into her voice. "That is no way to get out of a jam. The thing to do is to keep your head, and keep cheerful." She held up a silencing hand. "Oh! I know how hateful it is when you are in trouble to have a Pollyanna come in and preach, and above everything," she swept on, "try to think of all the things that might help Uncle Cyrus to help you, and tell them to him. And don't silt and brood. Instead of that, think, think, think, progressively, something that will help you out of this awful mess you're in."

"I don't seem able to think any more," he said simply. "My head's in a whirl. Lots of things that I could have sworn I knew, look different to me now, and lots of things that I was sure I didn't know," his eyes looked deeply into her, "begin to seem almost possible," he finished quietly.

"Lawrence," Betty laid her hand on his arm. "Where's Isobel?"

His eyes widened, and he stared at her wildly for a fraction of a second, then he closed his lids wearily.

"I don't know," he repeated. "They say she's dead, and that I killed her. But I, I don't know."

Betty studied the thin, aesthetic face before her compassionately. Her eyes dwelt on the richly waving black hair, followed down the aristocratic, thin-nostrilled nose, rested breathlessly on the generous, curved mouth, and came to rest at the firm square chin. Here was a man she thought, who would injure himself to help another, but who would be as helpless as a babe unborn to assist himself in any way outside of his own genius-chosen profession. And yet, she knew that man is capable of strange cruelties where his passions are concerned, and a little doubt

PLANS BATTLE ON DISMISSAL

Ewing Y. Mitchell Will Protest Roosevelt Order

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, June 18.—Ewing Y. Mitchell, who was removed last week by President Roosevelt as assistant secretary of commerce, has opened what he called a "fight to a finish" by making public charges against the department, which is headed by Secretary Roper.

He contended that "special interests" dominate the department. He also criticized a government contract with the United States lines for the permanent lay-up of the liner Leviathan, a transaction which he said was consummated by Secretary Roper in March, 1935.

The accusations were made in a letter which Mitchell said he sent to President Roosevelt on May 30, after the President had called for his resignation. The reason the President gave for his demand was that he wished to reorganize the transportation service of the government and desired "for this enlarged endeavor a man of large executive and administrative training."

Mitchell, who was one of the original Roosevelt men in Missouri, contended the Leviathan contract was "against the public interest" and that "those interested in the company, prominent among whom are P. A. S. Franklin, John M. Franklin, Vincent Axtor and Kermit Roosevelt," stood to benefit by it.

Mitchell said he had written President Roosevelt saying I had been stated here in the department that the contract was made at the President's direction.

"Taken Without Knowledge"
"If this is true," Mitchell's letter said, "I am satisfied that this action on your part was taken without full knowledge of all the facts and without full knowledge of the damage to the best interests of the government such action entailed."

He said the controller general's office had pointed out that the United States Lines company had received a government subsidy of over $3,000,000, less than four years prior to March, 1935, to insure the continued operation of the Leviathan for five years.

Mitchell quoted the acting comptroller general as saying that "now it is proposed to subsidize the non-operation of the vessel for the remaining two years by waiving liquidated damages that would accrue for failure to operate the vessel in the year 1935-1936 to the extent of $1,300,000 in addition to $920,000 accrued for the years 1933-1934."

Under the contract, Mitchell contended, the government is to receive $500,000 over a 12-year period, without interest, in return for waiving liquidated damages of $2,200,000. The company's promise to construct a new vessel, he said, was not a "value consideration."

"I apprehend," Mitchell said, "that one of the reasons why certain persons have urged my removal from office is because of my vehement opposition to transactions like the laying up of the Leviathan."

Champion Braddock Is Honest, Faithful Fighter, Neil Says

New Ruler of Heavyweight World, 29 Years Old, Never Thinks of Quitting; He Even Fought At One Time When Undernourished

(This is the first of four articles on the up, down, and up again career of Jimmy Braddock, new heavyweight champion of the world.)

By EDWARD J. NEIL, Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, June 18.—What kind of fellow really is this James J. Braddock, messenger boy, printer's devil, longshoreman, prize fighter, now heavyweight champion of the world?

Take a cross-section of all the big, even-tempered, slow-spoken, honest, faithful family men you know, that's one picture of the 29-year-old Irishman who dazed the fistic world by whipping Max Baer in Madison Square Garden's bowl on Long Island.

Think of someone you know, someone with a big wide open face, clear eyes, not particularly smart, but a bulldog in his devotion to his wife and three youngsters, always having a tough time making a go of it, but never quitting and too proud to ask favors he can't repay. That's another picture of him.

You can almost tell all these things just from looking at him in a prize ring. He has fought with broken hands, broken ribs, even a broken collar bone once, with deeply cut eyes, actually weak from lack of nourishing food. Yet he never has failed to fight to the limit of his strength and ability, which has not been much at times, plodding slowly along, pumping with his left hand, belting with a real good right, taking any amount of punishment without flinching.

By EDWARD J. NEIL, Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, June 18.—James J. Braddock was named to the prize ring from birth.

Early in the morning of June 7, 1906, the heart of Hell's kitchen on West 48th st., he was born to Mrs. Elizabeth O'Toole Braddock, and the proud father of Joe, now 70 and a watchman on the Hoboken docks. They promptly named the lusty infant James Jay in honor of James J. Jeffries, then heavyweight champion of the world.

The parent Braddocks, both mother and father, came from County Galway, Ireland, 45 years ago. One of Jim's uncles was a famed rough and tumble fighter, another a prominent foot runner. Two of Jim's three older brothers, Ralph and Joe, were fighters for a time. He has four brothers, in all and two sisters.

Started Fighting Early

The family moved to New Jersey where Father Joe set up in the trucking business when Jim was nine months old. He went to school in West New York, N. J., and his fighting career started early. He was ten when he flattened his first schoolmate, Elmer Furlong, with a single right. He fought Johnny Morris, another pal, 30 times for the fun of it, splitting the decisions about even.

At 12 he was a messenger boy, and one job he liked was carrying the round by round description to a newspaper office of Jack Dempsey's.

'Red's' Roundup Of Sports

Joe Owens, Ohio State's "flying kangaroo," extended his laurels to the west coast last Saturday and although he failed to break any records in the four events which he dominates he gave sufficient warning to Pacific coast athletes that he was no man to fool with on the cinder path.

Salem has a number of representatives in intercollegiate sports at the present time. One is Jack Carpenter at V. P. I. and the other is Ed Beck down at Newbury. And there is another Salem boy who deserves mention, and that's Charles Gibson who was awarded a varsity letter for swimming the backstroke at Allegheny college. Next year should bring to the foreground Wayne Siderer who is at Western Reserve at Cleveland under the tutelage of "Sad Salem Sam" Williamson.

Jimmy Scullion was a spectator at the city league ball games last evening Jim has just completed his schooling at Ohio university and plans to enter the coaching field. He tells me that he has several schools in line.

Congratulations to Judge Landis who yesterday ruled that "Alabama" Pitts could join the ranks of professional baseball. Johnny Evers, the able manager of the Albany club with whom Pitts is signed, threatened to quit the game if Judge Landis decided against Pitts.

Play in the quarter-finals of the Salem Merchants' Cup tournament will be completed this week. Ernie Burey of the Golf club announced today. Bob Campbell has already played and won his quarter-finals match and those remaining include Knepper-Earl Knox-Naragon; Gregg-Probst.

5 Ohio Gridders Are Ineligible

Coach Francis Schmidt Is Not Worried About It, However

COLUMBUS, June 18.—Five athletes expected to play important parts in Ohio State's fall grid campaign have been declared ineligible, but it didn't worry Coach Francis Schmidt today.

"They'll come out all right in time," said Schmidt, who added none of the cases "is serious."

But the five students and at least five other football candidates will be forced to do their conditioning over books in summer school, the university announced.

Among those who failed to make the necessary grade marks during the spring quarter are Stan Pincura, Lorain, Ernie Roush, Blacklick and Augie George, Dayton, all members of last year's varsity.

Two stellar performers from the freshmen team who showed up prominently at spring practice, Joe Williams of Barborton, and Ed West, Springfield also will spend vacations in the classroom.

All the students have "one or two" subjects to make up in order to become eligible to participate in the Big Ten sports activity, the university reported.

Pincura, as quarterback, was one of the key men last year in Coach Schmidt's tricky pass formations, which many observers predicted would make the team a contender for national honors this season.

Roush and George were in the line. The latter on numerous occasions was employed to place-kick points after touchdowns.

As backfield candidates, Williams and West gave many a spring practice spectator a thrill as they plunged and knifed their way through the opposing line for long gains.

TOLEDO MANAGER IRKED

CHICAGO, June 18.—The trials and tribulations attendant to trying to improve the standing of his seventh-place Toledo Mud-Hens apparently has worked Manager Fred "Nugget" Haney up to a battling pitch.

Haney, who protested Columbus' pair of victories in Sunday's doubleheader, yesterday complained so ably over a decision by Umpire Chester Swanson that he was ordered from the field. So reluctant was Haney to obey that police had to escort him to the visitors' quarters in the Columbus park.

Haney's example helped stir the Mud Hens into action for they overcame a 9 to 3 Red Bird lead with rallies in the seventh and eighth inning to win, 10 to 9.

'ALABAMA' PITTS AVOWS HE WILL MAKE GOOD NOW

Judge Landis Rules In Favor of Baseball's Ex-Convict

(By Associated Press)

ALBANY, N. Y., June 18.—Edwin C. ("Alabama") Pitts, one-time Sing Sing prison athlete, today faced the job of making good for the friends whose faith caused Kew-Faw Mountain Landis to unbar the doors of professional baseball.

Landis, baseball's high commissioner, late yesterday in Chicago overruled a decision banning Pitts from baseball but made it clear that his action resulted from the numerous appeals in behalf of the ex-convict.

He ruled the 24-year-old parolee might play with the Albany club of the International league but insisted his activities be limited to regular games of the schedule.

He explained he agreed with the stand taken by Judge W. G. Bramham, president of the National Association of Minor Professional Baseball Leagues, and the association's executive committee, in barring Pitts because he is an ex-convict, but added:

"Since then (the executive committee decision), however, a new situation has arisen. Conditions have been created as the result of Pitts' effort toward rehabilitation, in not permitting him to enter baseball employment. This was not contemplated, nor is it due to the ruling of the president and the executive committee of the National association."

"And in this situation, reputable people have expressed to me their belief that there has been a complete reformation of Pitts' character."

"Solely for these reasons, Pitts will be allowed to play, on condition that a new contract be executed by the Albany club and Pitts containing a covenant, that, during the year 1935, Pitts shall appear only in regular league games and shall not appear in or at exhibition games, this condition being imposed because it is distinctly in Pitts' interest, that mere notoriety be not exploited and capitalized."

The young southerner who served five years of an eight-to-16-year term for an armed robbery in New York City was quick to express his appreciation.

"Judge Landis will never regret having made that decision," he said. "I won't do anything to make him regret it."

He praised the two men who led the fight to win him a baseball position, General Manager Johnny Evers of the Albany club and Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing prison.

"They have been great. They stuck with me from the start of this thing and I'm glad to have a chance to show them they were right."

Evers, who twice threatened to sever all connections with the game if the minor league ruling was upheld, declared the decision "gives me the greatest thrill in my 33 years of baseball."

"The decision speaks for itself—it shows intelligence," said Warden Lawes. "Nothing can add to it."

WALLY BERGER, Braves—Collected two homers, a triple and a single off Cincinnati pitching in doubleheader.

ORAL HILDEBRAND and BRUCE CAMPBELL, Indians—Hildebrand limited Red Sox to six hits. Campbell knocked in four runs with a homer and two singles.

GUS MANCUSO, Giants—Had a perfect day at bat against Cardinals with double and four singles, scoring three runs.

CHUCK KLEIN, Cubs—Hammered two homers, each with one on base, to defeat Dodgers, 5-3.

PAUL WANER, Pirates—Led assault upon Phillies with two doubles and two singles.

WINS DIXIE MATCHES

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 18.—Bryan (Bitty) Grant of Atlanta, erased his final opponent in the Dixie amateur tournament here yesterday, with a 6-1, 6-2, 6-2 victory over Hal Surface of Kansas City. It was Grant's third straight crown and his seventh since 1927.

Twenty Grand Races

SCOT, Eng., June 18.—Twenty Grand, the American thoroughbred, makes his debut in English racing today.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's great champion, which set a track as well as a race record that still stands in winning the 1931 Kentucky Derby in 2:01 4-5, was entered in the Queen Anne stakes, a feature of the opening program on the Royal Ascot meeting.

Today

A Review of the Day's News
By Arthur Brisbane

MARTIAL law in Omaha, following street car strike riots. No one, at a distance, can decide the question of right or wrong in any strike, but it seems a pity that so many strikes should be found necessary, with more than ten millions already idle.

How many riots, or occurrences more dangerous, might have happened had not the government decided to spend some billions, on relief, dole, employment?

KEMAL PASHA, Turkish dictator, a man of great power, who threw out the Sultans, and finished the crop of brown-string-rangled harem ladies thrown into the Bosphorus, expects real war, soon. This he announces while dining off solid gold dishes that once belonged to the sultan in the beautiful white marble palace at Istanbul, that also belonged to the sultan.

Kemal blames other dictators, whom he calls "insincere leaders, who do not consider the seriousness of war, and have deceived nations by abuse of nationality and tradition.

KEMAL PASHA has not liked Mussolini since a little misunderstanding, in which Kemal told Mussolini "if you attack me, your problems will be to find room enough to bury the Italians that I shall kill for you."

Perhaps Mussolini will take that up, when he has time. Just now he has Abyssinia on his hands and is about to seize all silver coin in Italy to use in the Ethiopian campaign. Italians will get paper notes for their silver. Will that please them? Hardly.

Kemal has adopted the name "Kemal Ataturk" delightful to our slang-trained ears. And Mr. Ataturk, powerful product of the courageous and usually dark-eyed Turkish race has blue eyes.

Blue and gray-eyed men have ruled and do rule the world. Do you doubt it? Consider these: Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon, Lincoln, Grant, Shakespeare, Edison, Ford, Wagner, Goethe, Franklin D. Roosevelt; to say nothing of his distant cousin Theodore; also Rockefeller, senior and junior, and the conquering Norsemen, and John L. Sullivan.

MORE IMPORTANT than all that, is this question:

What will Franklin D. Roosevelt do to make his memory outlast that of his cousin who built the Panama canal? A hundred or a thousand years hence, every one will know that Theodore Roosevelt built that canal. In 50 years everything about NRA and the unemployed will be forgotten.

What will Franklin D. do? Will he dig a hole and tap central heat and limitless power deep down, making power on every farm, in every factory, as cheap as water? Will he make the Panama canal as obsolete as the dodo, by developing passenger and freight-carrying air fleets? He would like to abolish poverty, going Henry IV two better, by putting three chickens on every stove. But only divine omnipotence can do that. It is too big a job for any human, even a Roosevelt. There will be poor men, as long as there are poor minds.

WAR IS MANKIND'S most expensive pleasure. Two news items remind you of it. "War debts books are closed at the capital." Last Saturday, June 15, was pay day for European nations, that owe Uncle Sam ten billions in debts of so-called "honor." Honest little Finland paid, as she always does, on time, and scrupulously, the $165,453 due. No other of the 13 debtor nations paid one cent. England, that begged for money, so pathetic, because her back was to the wall, and sent Balfour here to sit close to the treasury; France, where, on a "sacre bleu" point of honor, one Frenchman will run another through with a sword, if the other will stand still long enough; all the proud nations watched once more. Of $811,678,392 that Uncle Sam would have received if Europe's word of honor had any value, he got $165,453, all that was owing of Finland, poorest, in money, of all nations involved.

THE OTHER war-cost "news item" shows that $45,000,000 will be added to Uncle Sam's pension expenses, connected with the Spanish-American war, the Boxer rebellion and the Philippine insurrection. The $45,000,000 of new money will go only to veterans who have been unable to prove that their military service had anything to do with their disabilities. This shows that one republic, at least is grateful, as it should be.

DICTATOR Ataturk Kemal assures an American interviewer that this country will not be able to keep out of the next war, and thinks it would be beneath our dignity to stay out, besides we should have gone into the League of Nations. What do you say? Money that next war will cost? Suppose that she should have paid to Uncle Sam. Europe has spent for the latest war contraptions, new gases, explosives, air fleets and it will be a good deal of a war, with free and easy flying across both oceans, no more submarine dodging, and instead, plenty of large-city bombing.

ADVICE TO THOSE PAST 50—Listen to Dr. D. A. Laird of Colgate university, who says that many men are worthless in the afternoon, because "the brain grows sluggish when a heavy luncheon draws the blood supply from the brain to the stomach." Such noonday meals are bad for both old and young men, but young men do not listen; old men should listen, because of the little time left to finish their work. The wise, older man instead of going out to luncheon and wasting time, will lie down at noon for half an hour, then eat two oranges, drink water, and resume work, eat nothing more until night.

Take plenty of water, forenoon and afternoon. Do not forget the oranges, although one big apple will do, if you have no oranges.
